Trivantage® Introduces Printable Building Facade Fabric

Serge Ferrari's Frontside TXM-50 creates design and energy-saving possibilities

BURLINGTON, N.C., July 9, 2025 — Trivantage, a one-stop shop for screen and mesh fabrics, hardware, and accessories, has introduced a new, printable facade fabric — Serge Ferrari's Frontside TXM-50. Serge Ferrari meshes are known for their dimensional stability, durability, and long-term aesthetics. This high-performance, lightweight fabric is designed to elevate both the look and function of new or existing buildings.

With 50% openness, Frontside TXM-50 complies with International Building Code (IBC) ventilation standards for parking structures and helps improve occupant comfort. By providing thermal and solar protection, it can also reduce energy costs. This fabric is ideal for flexible composite facades, shade structures, parking garages, and building cladding.

Frontside TXM-50's printability opens the door for unlimited, large-scale branding and design possibilities. Crafted with a uniform woven pattern, it delivers consistent strength in both warp and weft directions and features fewer fabric flaws, reducing waste and saving time during fabrication. Plus, it requires similar techniques and tools used in the manufacture and installation of commercial awnings, making it simple for those already in the industry to add to their business offerings.

Other notable features include:

- Excellent light and UV stability
- Extreme temperature and mold-resistant
- Weldable without pre-treatment
- Easy to clean and maintain
- PFAS-free
- 10-year warranty

Frontside TXM-50 is currently available in black and white and is sold in full rolls only. To learn more, visit www.trivantage.com/fabric-screen-mesh-serge-ferrari-frontside-txm-50.
